Building your Circle

"It takes a village" may sound cliché but thinking about the social support you will have is important.

Community

Many parents find it helpful to regularly attend a parent-baby group. Putting the meeting times and dates in the calendar now is helpful down the road. Many groups welcome expecting parents to attend. Find your people! There are both in-person and online support groups available.

To prepare for the first weeks at home, ask yourself:

- Who are two people I can trust and call on for advice?
- At home, who can help with:
 - Laundry Cleaning Groceries Errands
 - Care of older children Pet care Meals
- If I start to feel sad or anxious, who can I talk to about ways to help?
- If I start to feel sore or the baby has difficulty latching, who will I contact?

Mental Health

- It is normal for new mothers to experience intense mood swings starting 3-4 days after birth.
- Postpartum depression is common (1/8 women)
- Occurs anytime from birth to 1 year
- Symptoms include:

Feeling anxious, sad or down
 Frequent crying, tearfulness
 Loss of interest in things you enjoy
 Loss of appetite
 Decreased energy and motivation
 Difficulty sleeping
 Feelings of worthlessness, hopelessness, or guilt
 Unexplained weight loss or gain
 Feeling like life isn't worth living
 Showing little interest in your baby

- If you are experiencing any of these, contact your provider to help begin treatment

Hands-on Help
